What is Coronavirus?

Coronaviruses are a large family of RNA viruses that cause illness ranging from the common cold to severe respiratory diseases. These viruses were originally transmitted from animals to humans. Current data shows that the disease is mild in 80% of patients, severe in 14% and critical in 6%.

Common signs of covid-19 are similar to the common cold with infection showing symptoms such as sore throat, cough, fever, fatigue and in some cases pneumonia or multiple organ failure which can lead to death.

Covid-19 infection is spread through droplets produced from the respiratory system of infected people, often during sneezing and coughing.
